

Death Valley National Park

Death Valley. The name is gloomy, yet in this valley below sea level, you can find spectacular wildflower displays, snow covered peaks, singing sand dunes, old mines, wildlife of various varieties, palm trees, a castle, and last but not least the hottest spot in North America.

Years ago while temperatures scored way above 130 degrees in July and men working the mines loaded borax on wagons pulled by 20 mule teams, the wheels on the wagons were taller than the men. You will see one of these wagons at Furnace Creek Ranch. But don't fear this tour will include beautiful temperatures and spring like weather.
